Description of the Course :

This course provides an introduction to learning theories and their implications for, and application to, teaching. The course covers the full range of learning theories, such as cognitive, behavioural and humanist, and also more recent theoretical developments. It focuses in particular on those most relevant to teaching and training in the vocational education and training (VET) and adult learning sectors. While most students are already working as teachers and trainers, their prior qualifications may not have included a deep or broad theoretical basis. In this course they have the opportunity to explore learning theory from their own viewpoint as learners, and in the context of their own teaching practice. They will develop a critical stance, to examine tensions in the relationship between learning theories and current policies and practices in the VET sector. There is particular focus on the nature of the learners whom the students are likely to encounter in teaching in the VET sector.

Grade Scheme: Graded (HD, D, C, etc.)

Placement Component: No

Supplementary Assessment: Yes

Where supplementary assessment is available a student must have failed overall in the course but gained a final mark of 45 per cent or above and submitted all major assessment tasks..

- K2. Describe some means by which learners interpret, understand and make meaning from their experience
- K3. Discuss contemporary research which helps to explain how and why learners construct knowledge
- K4. Describe the characteristics of learners in VET settings.
- K5. Describe the different contexts in which VET and adult education are delivered.
- K6. Identify the relative advantages and disadvantages of basing practice on particular learning theories in differing situations.
- K7. Identify the appropriateness of different teaching approaches for different cultural groups.
- K8. Discuss the implications of the assumptions made in VET policy and practice about how students learn and teachers teach.
- K9. Critically analyse 'fashionable' learning theories
- K10. Investigate subject-specific pedagogy for their own industry area.

Skills:

- S1. Select repertoire of skills based on appropriate learning theories and on nature of learner cohort
- S2. Identify the most appropriate learning theories for individual learner cohorts
- S3. Demonstrate academic skills appropriate for Associate Degree level.
- S4. Critically analyse literature on learning theories.
- S5. Utilise learning theory to reflect on own teaching performance.

Application of knowledge and skills:

- A1. Apply learning theories to own practice as a learner
- A2. Apply learning theories to own teaching practice.

Course Content:

The content for this course includes an exploration of both traditional and contemporary theories of learning, and the relationship that these have with vocational education and training, across a diverse range of settings and students. It investigates the different ways in which knowledge might be constructed, and addresses some concerns about the relative value of different types of knowledge and pedagogy. Students are encouraged to apply the theoretical understandings to 'real life', by applying them to their own teaching and learning situation, as part of which they appreciate the contribution of subject-specific pedagogy. Students develop an understanding of how, as teachers, they can moderate the influence of national State and institutional policies and practices in VET.

Values:

- V1. Students value the diversity of their students, and are committed to ensuring that their professional practice meets their own learners' individual needs
- V2. Students are committed to excellence in teaching and learning in VET and aspire to achieve this in their own practice..
- V3. Students understand the importance of reflective practice and use this as a tool to enhance their own teaching and assessment practice
- V4. Students are committed to developing teaching practice which is underpinned by credible research and theoretical understandings
- V5. Students appreciate the value of their own continued learning.
- V6. Students acknowledge, and reflect in their own practice, the values associated with their own vocational area..

Graduate Attributes

The Federation University FedUni graduate attributes (GA) are entrenched in the Higher Education Graduate Attributes Policy (LT1228). FedUni graduates develop these graduate attributes through their engagement in explicit learning and teaching and assessment tasks that are embedded in all FedUni programs. Graduate attribute attainment typically follows an incremental development process mapped through program progression. One or more graduate attributes must be evident in the specified learning outcomes and assessment for each FedUni course, and all attributes must be directly assessed in each program
